Renovation Project Revitalizes Cal Poly P Landmark

Work has begun to renovate the Cal Poly P, a hilltop landmark that has overlooked the campus and city of San Luis Obispo for nearly a century. The area around the P has deteriorated and is in need of repair. The project will correct some erosion issues and restore the P to a safe condition for students to continue the tradition of decorating the monument to commemorate campus activities and to display school spirit. Late last year, the university temporarily stopped that decades-old tradition over safety concerns that erosion had made footing around the concrete structure unsafe for students toting 5-gallon buckets of paint, brooms, brushes and paint rollers. The student's commitment to improving and maintaining this iconic landmark and the tradition of decorating the P was so great that the student-run ASI approved funding for the project — the first major overhaul of Poly P since 1997. In addition, students will manage the day-to-day operating policies and scheduling activities related to the hilltop letter.
