New Statewide Partnership Announced to Combat Cyber Crime in California

Cal Poly has worked with the San Luis Obispo County District Attorney's Office, the California National Guard and other statewide partners to develop the California Cyber Training Complex (CCTC), a new cyber education center and collaboration space at the California National Guard's Camp San Luis Obispo. The first active facility at the CCTC, the Central Coast Cyber Forensics Lab (CCCFL), was unveiled March 1 at a ribbon-cutting ceremony. Under the District Attorney's management, CCCFL will provide participating law enforcement agencies with access to high-tech evidence collection capabilities. As an extension of Cal Poly's Cybersecurity Center, the CCTC also aims to educate the next generation cyber workforce and provide faculty and students with a new, hands-on research and learning environment. Learn more at <http://www.cctc.calpoly.edu>.

Scott Dawson to Return as Orfalea College of Business Dean

Former Orfalea College of Business Dean Scott Dawson will return to the position June 1. Dawson led the Orfalea College of Business from August 2014 until November 2016, when he stepped down after the loss of his wife, Bridget, in a bicycling accident in July. Associate Dean Kevin Lertwachara has been serving as interim dean since Nov. 1. Lertwachara, an information systems professor, will continue to serve as interim dean until June and then will return to his role as associate dean for the college's undergraduate programs.

Join Us March 9 for Poly Gives: One Day, Many Gifts (and Free Food!)

On March 9, Cal Poly welcomes alumni, parents, friends, faculty, staff and students to participate in the university's inaugural Day of Giving, Poly Gives. A 30-hour digital giving campaign, Poly Gives is part of a greater movement on campus to cultivate a spirit of philanthropy among current students, graduates and the Cal Poly community. While alumni, parents and friends are encouraged to make a gift to "the Cal Poly they love," students will be encouraged to show their Cal Poly spirit by writing personal thank you notes to donors and participating in social media contests throughout the day. Students, faculty and staff can sport their Cal Poly proud gear and come to Poly Gives UU Hour in the UU Plaza at 11 a.m. for free food, giveaways, a photo booth and more.
